In schools, wallet money can serve various purposes for students. Here are some uses:

Snacks and Extra Meals: Residential schools often provide regular meals, but students may want to purchase snacks or additional food items outside of meal times.

Personal Items: Students may need to buy personal items such as toiletries, stationery, or other necessities from the school store.

Recreational Activities: schools offer recreational activities or outings that may require additional fees. Wallet money can cover these expenses.

Transportation: If students need to travel off-campus for any reason, such as medical appointments or field trips, they may need funds for transportation expenses.

Special Events or Celebrations: Occasionally, there may be special events, celebrations, or fundraisers within the school where students can purchase items or contribute financially.

Emergency Expenses: Having wallet money on hand can be helpful in case of emergencies or unexpected situations where immediate expenses arise.
